1)

TEACHING INTERN - THE PUTNEY SCHOOL

The purpose of the Putney School Intern Program is to prepare young people for careers in teaching. To be eligible, candidates must have completed an undergraduate degree in the liberal arts and have a strong interest in the teaching profession. Internships are normally offered in two or three of the following disciplines: English, history, math, science, languages, and arts. We also consider the candidate's accomplishments outside the classroom and potential contribution to the whole community. The Putney School seeks to promote diversity through its program and hiring. <http://putneyschool.org>

REMINDER TO STUDENTS DOING JANUARY INTERNSHIPS

Don't forget to complete your internship application by December 15th! (11:59 p.m. on the 15th) Colby Internship Policy requires students to complete this application in order to receive Jan Plan credit of their experiences and transcript notation. Please visit www.colby.edu/career.serv to access the application and for additional information regarding internship policies.

3)

PHILADELPHIA TEACHING FELLOWS

The Philadelphia Teaching Fellows is currently recruiting candidates who are interested in teaching math, science, bilingual education, English, social studies, Spanish, or special education. No teaching experience or education-related coursework is necessary. Applicants must be able to demonstrate a record of achievement, including a 3.0 minimum undergraduate GPA.

Teaching fellows will have a direct impact on the achievement gap that exists between low-income students and their more privileged peers, receive intensive training this summer through the Institute, become a fully certified teacher, begin teaching in Fall 2008 and earn a full-time salary with complete benefits as first year teachers this fall

Apply at www.philadelphiateachingfellows.org.

4)

SUMMER BUSINESS INSTITUTE AT SIMON

June 2 - 20, 1980

Acquiring basic business skills will serve you well, whatever career you choose to pursue. The Simon School offers juniors, seniors and recent graduates of liberal arts colleges a three-week intensive immersion in the fundamentals of accounting, finance, marketing, and leadership taught by our outstanding faculty.
